Science Societies

Results of the 2025 Region 4 Collegiate Soil Judging Contest

By Dr. Kristofor R. Brye

November 10, 2025

Oklahoma State University, coached by Dr. Daniel Adamson (far left), finished first at the 2025 Region 4 Collegiate Soil Judging Contest on October 9 in Benton County, Arkansas.

The 2025 Region 4 Collegiate Soil Judging Contest was hosted by the University of Arkansas on October 9 in Benton County, Arkansas. A total of 49 undergraduate students representing seven institutions throughout the region, including Texas Tech University, West Texas A&M University, Oklahoma State University, Texas A&M University, Stephen F. Austin University, Texas A&M University–Kingsville, and the University of Arkansas, participated in this year's contest.

Oklahoma State University took first place overall and had the second-, third-, and fourth-place individuals, Haylee Sullins, Lilli Morgan, and Braden Boston, respectively. Texas A&M University took second place overall and had the first- and fifth-place individuals, Jared Torres and Zoey Lasch, respectively. Texas Tech University took third place overall.

Scenes from the 2025 Region 4 Collegiate Soil Judging Contest. Pictured in the lower right panel are (l to r): Zoey Lasch (fifth-place individual), Braden Boston (fourth-place individual), Lilli Morgan (third-place individual), Haylee Sullins (second-place individual), and Jared Torres (first-place individual).

More soil judging contests

More student articles

Back to current issue

Text © . The authors. CC BY-NC-ND 4.0. Except where otherwise noted, images are subject to copyright. Any reuse without express permission from the copyright owner is prohibited.